

Hurricane Boundary-Layer Processes and Prediction

Ph.D. Assistantship in Atmospheric Sciences

Investigate hurricane boundary-layer processes using crewed and uncrewed aircraft observations.

Study turbulence, momentum transport, and thermodynamic structure using in situ measurements, remote sensing, and simulations.

Test how sampling strategies and observation uncertainty affect hurricane track and intensity forecasts.

Complementary sampling of multiscale structure

